Would You Like to Buy a Raffle Ticket? You might win $1,000

Tom and I were at a small cruise-in this year and we had flyers and raffle tickets. Tom said, "I'll hand-out flyers and you sell the raffle tickets. You're better at selling than I am." So off we went. I hate selling raffle tickets, and selling those tickets went as I expected. Several people bought one, some bought 5 for $20, and a few said no. Then I saw a man I knew very well talking with a man I did not know. I asked them if they would like to buy a raffle ticket. The man I knew well bought one, and the man I did not know asked me several questions. He asked me where the money was going, what percent actually goes to the charity, etc. I must have answered satisfactorily as he pulled out his billfold and handed me a $100 bill. I said, "I don't think I have change for a $100." He quickly replied, "I don't want any change." Going through my mind was 'What, you want 25 raffle tickets? Really!' So, I actually said, "You want 25 tickets?" He said, "I don't see anyone else around here volunteering their time for a good cause." I asked for his name and he told me and I introduced myself and thanked him for his support. He then said, "Give me a minute." He was scanning the attendance at the cruise-in. He asked the man with him, "Who here could use some money?" He threw out a name and the other man said, "No he has money." Then he said another name and they both agreed he could use some money. He gave me the name and looked on his cell phone for the phone number and asked me to put all the tickets in his name and number. WOW! Maybe I was looking at selling raffle tickets all wrong. Selling the raffle tickets shouldn't be a burden but a blessing to those we have chosen to give the proceeds to.

Please mark your calendar with the events for the year 😊
